

Reference online magazine and newspaper articles differently than web sites.

---

Last Name, First Name and Initial(s) of author [followed by first name, initial(s), and last name of other author(s), if any].

Year. Title of article. Title of Newspaper or Magazine. [Online]. Available: <URL>
Accessed: Date.

---

Donn, Jeff

1999 Government, GE at odds on cleanup cost. The Associated Press State & Local Wire, October 7: [Online]. Available: <<http://www.lexis-nexis.com/universe>>
Accessed: November 5, 2000.

Liswood, Laura A.

1999 Gender politics and the Oval Office; Why don't women run for president? Baltimore Sun, March 31:23A. [Online]. Available: <<http://www.lexis-nexis.com/universe>> Accessed: August 5, 1999.

Wildstrom, Stephen H.

1999 A big boost for net privacy. Business Week, April 5:23. [Online]. Available: <http://www.lexis-nexis.com/universe>. Accessed: August 5, 1999.

Note:

1. Use the original publication date rather than the date you accessed the article or the date of the web site.
2. The year of publication is used as the date, but include the month and day of publication (if available) after the title of the magazine or newspaper. A comma separates the publication from the month and day.
3. Include page numbers or section number. These appear after the month and day. A colon separates month and day from the page or section number.
4. After the title of the magazine, newspaper, or distributor, type [Online]
5. If there is no author of the article, you can use the name of the newspaper as the author. In rare cases, you might use anonymous as the author.

(Donn 1999) or (Liswood 1999) or (Wildstrom)